

This lesson was a little confusing at first, the size of the events and the fact I didn't understand what it meant made it difficult to grasp what was happening, but now I understand how it works and I find it very useful since the code can register a button press even while the code is paused on a `thread.sleep` command.