

I found this lesson not to be difficult, but I appreciated the way that events can be used to take code away from the main body, allowing for more even distribution of code among the different sections of the program.