

This lesson was both interesting and a little more challenging than the first two, I found myself a bit mesmerized by the LED turning on as I pushed the button, but more importantly, it took me a few trials to write the code that only lets the counter increase when the button is pressed and not when it is being held, plus the bonus of only printing the amount of button presses when a button is pressed.