Similar to the LED blink, this lesson was pretty simple to understand, but still interesting for the opposite reason, because now I have written code that takes input from something other than my keyboard.