This challenge was not too hard, but I do recall 2 issues that were more difficult than the others: one was making it so the temp value only went up or down when the button was pressed and not when it was held, and the other, was keeping the code constantly checking for a button press, but still waiting ten seconds to print out the temperatures.